

Ashley McClure

A primary care physician trained in Internal Medicine at the University of Washington and went to medical school at Oregon Health Science University in the Pacific NW. She has worked with KP in Oakland since 2016 and is a co-founder of California Climate Health Now. Dr McClure's mission is to leverage the trusted voice of the medical community to translate what climate science means for people's health--in order to motivate the social will for implementing climate solutions. She is motivated to protect the health of our communities today and especially for her 18mo old daughter's generation.