

Amber Hewett is the National Wildlife Federation's Offshore Wind Energy Program Director. For the past decade, she has worked to advance state and federal policies that will both help launch a robust U.S. offshore wind industry on all coasts, and ensure wildlife, habitat, and communities are protected throughout every stage of development. She lives in Newburyport, MA and graduated from the University of Massachusetts Amherst.