

Valerie Feldman, Staff Attorney

Public Interest Law Project

Valerie Feldman is an attorney with the Public Interest Law Project, a statewide legal services support center that provides technical assistance, training, and litigation support on housing, land use, public benefits, and homelessness issues to legal services organizations all over the state. Prior to joining PILP, Valerie was a staff attorney at Legal Services of Northern California in the Sacramento office and worked on a wide variety of legal issues but developed a passion for using land use and housing element laws to try and address her clients significant need for affordable housing. She previously served on the Housing California board and now serves on the board of the Sacramento Housing Alliance.
