

Julia Lave Johnston is President of the California Chapter of the American Planning Association and Founder and Owner of Planwell Consulting.

She recently retired as Sustainability Program Manager at the Institute for Local Government, where she led the Land Use and Healthy Neighborhoods components of the Institute's Sustainable Communities Program. Her prior position was as Director of the Land Use and Natural Resources program at UC Davis Extension.

During the Schwarzenegger Administration, Lave Johnston was Deputy Director for Planning Policy in the Governor's Office of Planning and Research (OPR) where she coordinated the Strategic Growth Council during its first two years. Prior to her time at OPR, Julia was a Senior Policy Analyst at the California Research Bureau (CRB); Project Manager with the Local Government Commission (LGC); and Public Information Staff at the Population Council, an international non-profit organization in New York City.

Lave Johnston received a bachelor's degree in English from the University of California, Berkeley, and a master's degree in Community and Regional Planning from the University of Oregon