Water Follies Continue

It is hard to wrap our minds around the campaign to build two giant tunnels to divert Northern the San Francisco Bay Delta Estuary. The current battleground is the State Water Resource Board. They have begun a scheduled 55 days of hearings for just the first part of the process.

Any logical person would first ask, what are the water quality standards for the Delta that would be required by such a massive diversion? The uncontested fact is that the standards have not been updated in decades, the time when those outdated standards have proven to be insufficient to protect against the imminent extinction of several species.

Yet the powerful water special interests pushed the Brown administration to start the permit process for the tunnels before the standards are updated. They claim that even after they would spend at least $10 billion to build the tunnels, they would agree to cut back their diversions if new protective standards were established that they could take.

It is not just environmentalists. Fishers, Delta agricultural and environmental justice groups are also concerned. An unprecedented number of water districts in the Sacramento and San Joaquin valleys are also concerned. They realize that allowing the State to divert that much water into the tunnels would reduce the water supply available for them to meet the needs of their residents, businesses and farms.

Governor Brown is known for properly deriding those who deny climate change. Will it upse own staff are testifying at the hearings that they do not have to consider higher temperature droughts when they are planning how to operate these huge diversions?

While all of this has a weird Alice in Wonderland feel, another major fatal flaw of the tunnels unsolvable. Show me the money.

State law prohibits State taxpayers from paying any of the costs. Congress has no interest to California (the Congressional rule is known as ABC – Anywhere But California).

That leaves water districts and their ratepayers to pick up the tab. Metropolitan Water Distr Manager is pushing his Board of Directors to commit to putting up about a quarter of the $1 construction cost. An important note: that estimate is based on only 10% of the design corr would undoubtedly be much greater – remember the Bay Bridge overruns?

But even just looking at the $16 billion none of the other potential funding partners have cor Valley Water District has begun to ask the hard questions including what better alternatives their water supply needs.

However the real Achilles heels are the Westlands Water District and Kern County Water A have to pay over half the cost. Just imagine going to their farmers and asking them to borre for a project that would take at least 20 years to come on line with no guarantee whatsoever additional drop of water even if it is built.

With all those problems and more, what's likely to happen? We believe that sometime in th tunnels proposal will collapse of its own weight. After the proponents complete their grievin reach out to them again with ideas for a sustainable water, energy, climate change, and job Stay tuned.
